What is estate planning and who should consider it?

Your estate is the sum of your lifetime of hard work, smart investing and sensible financial planning. It is your greatest legacy to your loved ones. Estate planning allows you to protect the wealth you've accumulated over your lifetime while helping you to better manage your family's financial future.

No matter how young or old you are, how much wealth you have, whether you're married with children or are single, everyone can benefit from developing an estate plan. It not only gives you the peace of mind of knowing your wishes are in place, it can also reduce the taxes and expenses of your estate, as well as make the transition of your assets to your named beneficiaries a quicker and smoother process.

Who can help you plan your estate?

While this brochure is a general reference guide that can help you get started on the estate planning process, it's important to prepare your personal estate plan with the help of professionals such as a will and estate planner, an estate lawyer¹ and an accountant. It's also important to talk to your advisor about specific issues relevant to your situation.

What are the benefits of estate planning?

Planning your estate helps minimize many of the concerns that may arise when you pass on. Without a plan, your legacy may be unduly affected by estate fees, or it may take years to pass on your estate. It's also important to communicate your wishes to your family and named beneficiaries to avoid confusion, hurt feelings and family discord.

BY PLANNING YOUR ESTATE, YOU ARE HELPING TO:

- Protect your capital from taxation so more of your wealth can go to your named beneficiaries
- Pass on your wealth to your named beneficiaries according to your wishes
- Minimize family conflict by letting your loved ones know of your wishes
- Enable certain assets, such as segregated funds, to bypass probate (the process by which a court formally approves a will as the valid and last testament of the deceased person)
- Minimize taxes and fees by structuring your wealth in a tax-efficient manner
- Structure a portfolio of assets that may help protect the confidentiality of your named beneficiaries and keep your estate as a private family matter
- Avoid estate freezes and the delays that occur when your assets are tied up in the court system
- Structure your wealth to avoid the concept of “affluenza”, which occurs when adult children do not have the experience to manage sudden wealth

What you should consider when planning your family's estate

There are many steps involved in the estate planning process. Here are some guidelines that will help you understand which information you need to get started.

■ Gather the following documents and information and keep them in a centralized file:

- Birth certificates
- Marriage certificates
- Social insurance numbers
- Real estate deeds
- Wills and powers of attorney
- Safety deposit box information
- Contact information for your:
 - Executors¹ and named beneficiaries
 - Advisors, lawyers and accountants

The RBC Insurance® Family Inventory Guide can help you capture and organize this important information. You can obtain a copy of this guide from your advisor.

■ Prepare or re-evaluate your wills

- Prepare, review or update your will(s) to ensure they reflect your wishes
- Prepare, review or update your powers of attorney
- Designate someone to take over your personal affairs should you become unable to manage your estate
- Designate an executor(s) or a corporate executor to administer your will after you pass on
- Careful consideration should be given in appointing a spouse, child, sibling or other family member

■ What should you consider when choosing an executor(s)?

- As an executor, you are responsible for settling an estate according to the deceased's wishes
- Legal, tax and administrative issues can make the duties of an executor complex and time-consuming

- Many people find these responsibilities especially burdensome while they are grieving the loss of a loved one — careful consideration should be given in appointing a spouse, child, sibling or another family member

Use the RBC Insurance Executor Checklist to understand the responsibilities of the executor(s) of your estate, and then designate them accordingly. You can obtain a copy of this checklist from your advisor.

■ Make an inventory of your family's assets and liabilities

- List all of your assets and liabilities
- Review the ownership structure of your assets;
- Single or various joint ownerships with joint tenants with and without the right of survivorship
- Name your beneficiaries either as revocable or irrevocable;
 - revocable means the owner can change the named beneficiary at any time
 - irrevocable means you need the consent of the named beneficiaries to make the change

■ Assess your financial preparations

- Review your pension(s) and investments to ensure they meet your financial goals
- Review and evaluate your insurance coverage to ensure the amount and type of insurance is adequate to cover final expenses and all of your family's ongoing needs
- Arrange a prepaid funeral to spare your family the burden of having to deal with the details of a funeral in their time of distress; it also relieves them of the financial stress associated with funeral costs

RBC Guaranteed Investment Funds: A smart investment for your estate

As mentioned previously, there are many strategies and tools that can help you in planning your estate. Take, for example, segregated funds. Segregated funds, like RBC® Guaranteed Investment Funds (GIFs), offer you the growth potential of a mutual fund with the security of a principal guarantee.

They are similar to mutual funds in many respects, but provide a number of additional features and benefits. Here is a quick summary of the added features that can make segregated funds an excellent alternative to mutual funds.

SEGREGATED FUNDS AND MUTUAL FUNDS: SIMILARITIES AND DIFFERENCES.

Features	Segregated Funds ¹	Mutual Funds
Professional portfolio management	■	■
Diversification among asset classes and management styles	■	■
Grow a portfolio while diversifying risk	■	■
Liquidity: easy access to your money through daily price valuations	■	■
Ability to pass probate and keep financial affairs private	■	Occasionally ²
Potential creditor protection for registered accounts	■	■
Potential creditor protection for non-registered accounts	■
A guarantee of principal (or a specified percentage) at maturity ³	■
A guarantee of principal (or a specified percentage) at death ³	■
Lock in market gains using resets	■

¹ Segregated fund fees are higher than mutual fund fees as they include a management fee and an insurance fee component.

² Non-registered accounts with joint ownership and right of survivorship only (all provinces except Quebec). Registered accounts can bypass probate when a beneficiary is named.

³ Withdrawals reduce guarantees proportionately. Guarantees end at age 100.

RBC GIFs benefit your estate planning in many ways

- Bypass probate — As a special investment vehicle, segregated fund assets bypass probate (unless the estate is named as beneficiary), remain private and ensure that proceeds are paid directly to your named beneficiaries (not applicable in Quebec).
- Preserve capital and upside growth potential — Segregated funds provide risk protection against declining markets through maturity and death benefit guarantees. They also provide the ability to lock in investment gains using reset features
- Minimize fees — Investing in segregated funds allow you to minimize probate, executor, legal and accounting fees due to the probate bypass benefit on assets held in these contracts
- Provide possible creditor protection — Segregated funds offer possible creditor protection, which is beneficial for business owners or self-employed professionals whose assets may be exposed to creditors

When you choose to invest in segregated funds, such as RBC GIFs, the underlying funds are backed by the integrity and expertise of RBC Global Asset Management Inc. You can benefit from the proven track record of delivering strong long-term performance and world class investment management from RBC Global Asset Management Inc., one of Canada's leading money managers.

The following case study illustrates how RBC GIFs are a smart investment choice when it comes to estate planning.

The Johnson Family — How they protected their investments

Steve, 66, and Sara, 64, have three children. Steve is semi-retired and does consulting work on a part-time basis. Sara is still working, but plans to retire in two years time.

Steve and Sara have a sizeable retirement portfolio, consisting of stocks, bonds and mutual funds, which is adequate to provide retirement income for the rest of their lives. They intend to leave at least $500,000 of their assets to their children as an inheritance, but they do not have a formal estate plan. They'd like the opportunity for more market growth on these assets, but would also like to minimize their risk and preserve the capital for their children's inheritance.

Last year, a close friend and his wife passed away. Through their will, they left $250,000 in mutual fund investments to their children. Months later, the children are still waiting to receive their inheritance because all of their parents' assets are caught up in the probate process.

THE RIGHT ADVICE FROM THEIR ADVISOR

Steve and Sara would like to avoid a lengthy, costly and public process for their children's inheritance. They also want to be sure their children have access to the funds quickly after their death.

They sat down with their advisor, who proposed that they update their wills and restructure their investment portfolio in order to protect and expedite funds going to their heirs. He suggested that they move the $500,000 intended for their children into an RBC GIF Contract. This solution provides them with the protection and growth potential they are looking for while also allowing the funds to be accessible should the need arise.

INCORPORATING SEGREGATED FUNDS CAN BENEFIT STEVE AND SARA IN AT LEAST FOUR WAYS

- Capital preservation — The death benefit guarantee preserves their capital for their named beneficiaries (their three children). This unique feature of segregated funds means that regardless of market fluctuations, 100% of their initial capital in an RBC GIF Contract is guaranteed to be paid to their children¹. Mutual funds and traditional stock and bond portfolios do not have this feature.
- Immediate access to investments — Since an RBC GIF Contract is an insurance policy with named beneficiaries, the death benefit proceeds can bypass probate (unless the estate is named as beneficiary) and the death benefit can be paid quickly and directly to their children.
- Privacy — Another benefit of bypassing probate is that Steve and Sara will keep their children's inheritance private and their names will not be revealed.
- Savings — As segregated funds enable you to bypass probate (unless the estate is named as beneficiary), executor, legal and accounting fees can also be minimized. Steve and Sara's estate could potentially save a minimum of $7,000 just in probate fees². Executor, legal and accounting fees may also be incurred and are dependent on the size and complexity of the estate.

¹If the person invests in RBC GIF before the age of 80. Reduced proportionally by any withdrawals.

²For illustrative purposes only. Assuming a $500,000 segregated fund portfolio for the province of Ontario. Ontario fees are calculated as follows: $250 + $15 per $1,000 of assets over $50,000. Probate fees vary by province. Source for Ontario probate is the Estate Administration Tax Act, 1998 S.O. 1998, Chapter 34.

Any amount that is allocated to a segregated fund is invested at the risk of the contractholder and may increase or decrease in value. RBC Guaranteed Investment Funds are segregated funds and are referred to as individual variable annuity contracts. RBC Life Insurance Company is the sole issuer and guarantor of the guarantee provisions contained in these contracts. The underlying mutual funds and portfolios available in these contracts are managed by RBC Global Asset Management Inc. When clients deposit money in an RBC Guaranteed Investment Funds contract, they are not buying units of the RBC Global Asset Management Inc. mutual fund or portfolio and therefore do not possess any of the rights and privileges of the unitholders of such funds.
